The constant increasing popularity of the "Old Reliable" is strong argument of its deservedness. This is the oldest retail boot and shoe house in this city, and to day retains a most enviable reputation for fair dealing. A bankrupt sale or a new store may flourish for a short time, yet there is nothing but the highest besidess qualifica-tions, coupled with fair dealing, that can maintain the lead in the long run. There may be some few citizens who have not examined Hell & Co.'s new stock; if so, they may count on having missed a royal sight. This city does not contain a finer or better selec
